

Nikkei Indexes Monthly Newsletter Vol.10

As of Sep. 2020

- Nikkei Stock Average (Nikkei 225) marks 70th anniversary on September 7, 2020. -

Regarding the value of the Nikkei Stock Average on Oct. 1

Due to a system failure of the Tokyo Stock Exchange, trading of all the listed stocks were halted all day. Under such a circumstance, Nikkei decides the four types of prices (open, high, low, and closing values) of the Nikkei Stock Average as 23,185.12, the same value as the previous day.

| Monthly Summary of the Tokyo Market

- The Nikkei Stock Average (Nikkei 225) closed September at 23,185.12, rose slightly (45.36 points/0.19%) from the end of August. After the resignation of Shinzo Abe, former Japan's Prime Minister, Yoshihide Suga, former Chief Cabinet Secretary of Abe administration took over his position. This change was viewed as continuation of Abe's economic and monetary policies by the market and supported Nikkei 225's solid performance. Buying orders to capture dividends at the end of September also helped the index to stay over 23,000 mark.
- However, trading activity was generally slow and the gain of the Nikkei 225 was the lowest since December 2017. The trading value per day was below 2 trillion yen (approximately 9.5 billion dollars) in five consecutive days from the start of the month.
- In the mid of September, Japanese market was influenced by the adjustment of the U.S. high-technology equities. Other news such as AstraZeneca's announcement to suspend the new coronavirus vaccine clinical trial, and advantage of Joe Biden's who supports tax rise in the U.S. Presidential election imposed a burden on the market.
