Monthly Summary of the Tokyo Market

- The Nikkei Stock Average (Nikkei 225) closed February at 26526.82, lost 475.16 points (1.75%) since the end of January. In the beginning of the month, rally of the US stocks supported the Japanese equities and the companies reporting better financial results attracted investors. However, Russia’s invasion into Ukraine triggered wide range of concerns over the market such as negative effects on the supply chains, commodity price hike of grains and crude oil, and adverse effects to western nations by the economic sanctions against Russia. As a result, the market dropped sharply and the Nikkei 225 marked 25970.82, the lowest since November 20, 2020.
- US Bureau of Labor Statistics announced that the Consumer Prices Index climbed 7.5% in January on year-on-year basis, the largest annual gain in 40 years, since February 1982. Investors were cautious about inflationary pressure and it fueled speculation of the interest rate hike by Federal Reserve’s decision to tighten its monetary policy.
