

Nikkei Indexes Monthly Newsletter Vol.34

October 2022 Edition

Monthly Summary of the Tokyo Market

- The Nikkei Stock Average (Nikkei 225) closed September at 25937.21, dropped sharply by 2154.32 points (7.66%) from the end of August. As the end of the month basis, it marked the lowest since October 2020. This is the biggest single month decline since March 2020, when the stock markets were in turmoil under the rise of infection cases of the Covid-19 globally.
- As the market participants and investors predicted the U.S. Federal Reserve (FRB) would tighten monetary policy drastically under the inflationary pressure, the Nikkei 225 followed the down trend of the major U.S. equity indexes triggered by decline in the technology stocks. Although ease of the restrictions on international visitors announced by Kishida Administration was expected to benefit from a rebound in global tourism, it only had limited impact on the market.
- Nikkei 225 lost 1884.22 points (6.77%) in the latest 6 months since the end of March. Tightening monetary policy by major central banks in the wake of global inflation cast a shadow over the market sentiment.
- The Nikkei 225 Climate Change 1.5°C Target Index, a new member of the Nikkei indices which was jointly developed with the U.S. Wilshire was down by 2119.36 (7.57%) and ended September at 25846.89.
