Monthly Summary of the Tokyo Market

- The Nikkei Stock Average (Nikkei 225) gained two months in a row and closed November at 27968.99, increased 381.53 points (1.38%) from the end of October. With the result of the U.S. Consumer Price Index in October and other statistics, hopes for slower pace of interest rate hikes by the U.S. Federal Reserve supported the index's firm performance.
- As backed by historically weak Japanese Yen against U.S. Dollar, many of the Japanese corporations showed solid earnings growth. The news that Berkshire Hathaway, run by Warren Buffett, had raised its stakes in five biggest trading houses helped their stock prices rise.
- During the month, Nikkei 225 recovered the 28,000 mark a few times, the milestone since the middle of this September. However, the trend was limited due to global inflationary pressure and the surge of the Covid-19 infection cases in China.
- The Nikkei 225 Climate Change 1.5°C Target Index, a new member of the Nikkei indices which was jointly developed with the U.S. Wilshire was up to 27861.01, gaining 330.10 points (1.19%) since the end of October.
